

Nina Price has had a long career in Food Science and Research and Development. With over 25 years of experience ranging from developing restaurant menus to heading up the Research & Development team for Boston Market, Price brings a breadth of knowledge to Mont Blanc Gourmet.

As a product developer for Mont Blanc Gourmet, Price plays a large part in the research and development that goes into creating the perfect flavors for custom formulation blends. She helps to create the exact recipes to fit Mont Blanc Gourmet's customer's taste palettes.

In addition to a bachelors degree in Food Science from Purdue University and a Masters from Oregon State University, Price has her AOS from the Culinary Institute of America and a Diploma from the prestigious Cordon Bleu Culinary Institute in London, England. But her education goes far beyond learning in the classroom. She has worked as a Research Chef on Coca-Cola and as Senior Scientist for Kellogg. She has also taught, authored books and has had several articles published on culinary topics.
